

Making a structural cross section VII: missing section

Our correlations in Part VI suggested that a fault is present in Well 3. The next thing to do is to look for missing section (evidence of a normal fault) or repeated section (evidence of a reverse fault). Comparison of Well 3 with its neighbors indicates missing section, and thus a normal fault. . . . and we move on . . .

