

Rheologically reasonable cross-sections I

This page shows four logs from petroleum boreholes, placed on the page in their structurally correct positions and thus hung in preparation for making a structural cross section. No lines have been added from log to log; that is left as an exercise for the reader. Parts II and III of this series present a favored interpretation and some less-favored interpretations or representations.

