

Rheologically reasonable cross-sections II

This page shows three cross-sections, all of which interpret the same geologic information (the same four logs from petroleum boreholes). The cross-sections differ in how the information is interpreted.

The top cross-section is the most rheologically reasonable, in that strain is most evenly distributed in that cross-section.

